

Religious attack on free speech in India

Posted: Wed, 4th Jan 2012

A Judge in India has given social websites, including Google and Facebook, six weeks to remove all 'anti-religious' content.

In what is being seen as a religious crackdown on free speech, the Delhi court ordered 22 social networking sites, including Yahoo and Microsoft, to wipe the 'objectionable' and 'defamatory' contents and file compliance reports by February 6, 2012.

The complaint was filed by Mufti Aijaz Arshad Qasmi who had objected to a number of images on the websites which he complained would cause "irreparable loss and injury to the people who are offended by them".

He argued that some of the images defamed Hindu gods, Prophet Mohammed and other religious figures.

IT Minister Kapil Sibal says he is not censoring internet users, but wants to remove degrading images. The court order demands the sites remove photographs, videos or texts that might offend religious sentiments. He has recently held talks with representatives of the companies about how to stop the posting of what religious leaders find "offensive".

Mr Sibal said: 'There were some demeaning, degrading, clearly pornographic depictions of gods and goddesses which no reasonable, sensible person anywhere in the world would accept, on any site.'

The minister insisted he was not smothering free speech but was suggesting screening possible 'incendiary' material.

See also: Egyptian Christian detained for posting picture of Mohammed on Facebook page

- Share on What's App
- Share on Facebook
- Share on Twitter
- Share on Email
- Subscribe to RSS Feed

Tags: Free speech

Related Campaigns

-

Protect freedom of expression

We promote free speech as a positive value.

Read More

Related Articles

Response unit needed to tackle blasphemy flashpoints, report says

Recommendations echo NSS calls for more support for schools facing religious intimidation and threats. Read More »

NSS address urges UN to call for government action on human rights

Religious privilege is undermining rights of UK citizens, NSS tells UN committee. Read More »

Anti-blasphemy extremism “gaining momentum” in UK, report warns

Counter-extremism report recommends review of religious charities linked to anti-blasphemy activism. Read More »

New extremism definition may put free speech at risk, NSS warns

Proposed definition could 'label secularists as extremists'. Read More »

A state Church is no bulwark against extremism – but secularism is

With its commitment to the separation of religion and state and safeguarding the rights of all individuals, secularism can provide an effective defence against the spread of extremism, says Stephen Evans. Read More »