

Take action! Call on your MP to outlaw caste discrimination

Posted: Thu, 28th Mar 2013

The National Secular Society is calling on supporters to urge their MP to back legislation aimed at protecting victims of caste-based discrimination in the UK.

Despite Government opposition, the House of Lords overwhelmingly voted on 4 March (by a majority of 103) to make caste a protected characteristic under equality law (via a new clause in the Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Bill). After the Easter recess MPs will vote on whether to retain the new clause.

The Government accepts that caste discrimination exists, but refuses to outlaw it as other discrimination is outlawed, instead favouring an 'education programme' and an informal conciliation service which it claims is a more appropriate and targeted way of dealing with incidents related to caste discrimination. The National Secular Society has warned that a failure to legislate burdens the oppressed with continually challenging caste discrimination wherever and whenever it occurs – a situation particularly unsatisfactory where the oppressors are more powerful than the oppressed, and often their employers.

A report (pdf) into the prevalence of caste discrimination in the UK, commissioned by the Government Equalities Office and undertaken by the National Institute for Economic and Social Research (NIESR) in 2010, found significant evidence of caste discrimination, harassment and bullying in employment, education and the provision of services, including care.

The report estimates there are at least 50,000 (and perhaps in excess of 200,000) people living in Great Britain who are classified as "low caste".

In opposing legislation, the Government is ignoring a recent UN Human Rights Council recommendation (pdf) that called for the immediate adoption of legislation to outlaw caste discrimination. A legal opinion (pdf) obtained by the National Secular Society (and shared with the Government) concluded that the UK is "obliged in international human rights law to legislate for caste discrimination and further obliged to provide victims of such discrimination with an effective remedy."

Employment, equality, diversity and discrimination law specialist Michael Rubenstein, in this analysis on the long-running case of *Begraj v Heer Manak Solicitors*, which raised issues of alleged caste discrimination, called the opinion "convincing" and said: "there seems no convincing justification for the Government not to agree to bring the prohibition on caste discrimination into force."

The Minister for Faith and Communities, Baroness Warsi, has publicly accepted the seriousness of the problem of caste discrimination. Whilst in opposition, Baroness Warsi accused the then Labour Government of putting the issue off "for another day" when it accepted an enabling amendment the Equality Bill to facilitate future legislation, rather than outlaw caste discrimination at the time.

Stephen Evans, campaigns manager at the National Secular Society said: "The case for outlawing caste-based discrimination appears clear. The Government's reluctance to now do so is therefore both perplexing and concerning. We sincerely hope their reluctance to provide important legal protection to vulnerable British citizens from the South Asian communities isn't being unduly influenced by Hindu organisations with vested interests.

"It's now time for the Government to honour our international obligations and outlaw caste discrimination, offering hope to the tens of thousands of British Asians whose lives are blighted by such prejudice."

A briefing paper on caste discrimination can be found here.

Using the arguments set out above and in the briefing paper, please write to your MP urging them to ensure that proper legal protection is provided for victims of caste discrimination in Great Britain by urging the Government to reconsider its position on the new clause in the Enterprise and Regulatory Reform Bill.

We believe this is vital to upholding the essential British values of equality and justice for all citizens.

You can contact your MP via the WriteToThem website

- Share on What's App
- Share on Facebook
- Share on Twitter
- Share on Email
- Subscribe to RSS Feed

Tags: Caste

Related Campaigns

•

End caste discrimination

Caste discrimination should be prohibited by law.

Read More

Related Articles

Hindu group threatens secularists with police over “offensive” talk

Hindu charity told Leicester Secular Society it would report talk on caste to local Hindu community and police. Read More »

Ep 36: Faith-shaped holes in the Equality Act

This month marks the tenth anniversary of the Equality Act 2010 coming into effect, a landmark piece of legislation... Read More »

Report: equality law failing to protect people from faith-based discrimination

Equality law is failing to protect the non-religious and members of religious minorities from discrimination, a National... Read More »

Push government on caste discrimination, NSS tells UN rapporteur

The National Secular Society has urged the UN special rapporteur on minority issues to push the UK government to outlaw... Read More »

NSS urges UN to push government to pass law on caste discrimination

The National Secular Society has urged the UN Human Rights Council to push the UK government to legislate to outlaw... Read More »