

Most young people in UK have no religion, says survey

Posted: Wed, 21st Mar 2018

The National Secular Society has called for "a rethink of religion's public role" after a report found that almost three-quarters of young people in the UK say they have no religion.

According to Europe's Young Adults and Religion, 70% of 16- to 29-year-olds in the UK say they have no religion and 59% say they never attend a religious service. Just seven per cent said they were Anglican; 10% described themselves as Catholic; and six per cent said they were Muslim.

Only seven per cent said they attended religious services on at least a weekly basis.

A majority of young people in 12 of the 22 European countries the report studied said they had no religion. Only in Poland, Portugal and Ireland did more than 10% of young people say they attend religious services at least once a week.

NSS chief executive Stephen Evans called the report "an important reminder of the need for a rethink of religion's public role, not least the public funding of faith schools".

"Separating religion from public life is the only way to protect everyone's right to freedom of and from religion fairly. That means it's the right thing to do no matter what surveys such as this find. But this is the latest in a series of reminders that the way the UK treats religion in public life is incongruous with the views of its people – particularly the next generation of citizens and parents.

"Those who defend the establishment of the Church of England, the presence of bishops in the House of Lords or the fact that faith groups run large numbers of publicly-funded schools are going to be left making increasingly tenuous arguments in the years ahead. Politicians should take note: the UK is ready to stop deferring to them and embrace a secular state."

The report's findings add weight to the arguments made in the NSS's recent report, Rethinking religion and belief in public life: a manifesto for change. They are also roughly in line with those from other sources. Last year's British Social Attitudes survey found that a majority of Britons had no religion, including over 70% of 18- to 24-year-olds and over 60% of 25- to 34-year-olds. Just three per cent of those aged 18-24 described themselves as Anglican.

In October a report by the polling firm Ipsos found that 62% of under-65s in Britain thought religion did more harm than good. In the same study fewer than a quarter of British people agreed that 'my religion defines me as a person'.

Stephen Bullivant, a professor of theology and sociology at St Mary's University in London and the author of the latest report, said religion was "moribund" in much of Europe.

"With some notable exceptions, young adults increasingly are not identifying with or practising religion. Cultural religious identities just aren't being passed on from parents to children. It just washes straight off them."

The report was based on data from the European social survey of 2014-16.

No more faith schools

We need inclusive schools free from religious discrimination, privilege or control. Join our campaign.

- Find out more
- Donate

- Share on What's App
- Share on Facebook
- Share on Twitter
- Share on Email
- Subscribe to RSS Feed

Tags: Disestablishment

Related Campaigns

-

**Disestablish the Church of England**

A state religion has no place in a 21st century democracy.

Read More

Related Articles

**New extremism definition may put free speech at risk, NSS warns**

Proposed definition could 'label secularists as extremists'. Read More »

**A state Church is no bulwark against extremism – but secularism is**

With its commitment to the separation of religion and state and safeguarding the rights of all individuals, secularism can provide an effective defence against the spread of extremism, says Stephen Evans. Read More »

Report: CofE safeguarding “below standards” of secular institutions

Most victims and survivors unsatisfied with safeguarding approaches, while safeguarding 'weaponised' to remove those "seen as a nuisance", report finds. Read More »

Resist calls for £50m a year for churches, NSS urges minister

Churches trust also calls for churches to host NHS services. Read More »

Review: CofE leaders mainly to blame for sacking safeguarding body

"Extreme time pressure" imposed chiefly by archbishop of Canterbury caused "serious design flaws" in safeguarding board, review finds Read More »