

NSS reiterates call for abolition of chancel repair liability

Posted: Thu, 24th May 2018

The National Secular Society has urged the Law Commission to recommend the abolition of a measure which requires certain landowners to pay for repairs to local Anglican churches.

The commission has recently announced it will look into chancel repair liability (CRL) in its forthcoming work programme. But it will mainly aim to "close the loophole" which leads purchasers of property to search and/or insure against the risk of liability unnecessarily, costing an estimated £20m each year.

The NSS wants the commission to go further and propose the abolition of CRL. The liability has its origins in Norman ecclesiastical law and was widely thought to have become a dead letter. But in the last fifteen years the Church of England has put pressure on parishes to register it against properties, a measure which was likely to have an adverse effect on value and saleability.

There are few reliable records relating to CRL and many of these registrations are also incorrect. But even where the registration is technically correct, adverse effects on value and saleability arising from registration are likely to be unjustified as the church has bowed to public pressure and practically ceased any attempt to collect CRL from residential property.

In 1985 the commission recommended that "[\[CRL\] arising from the ownership of land should be abolished after ten years](#)", in a report prepared in co-operation with the church. The commission's report was prescient, but the government did not act upon it.

CRL was revived 15 years later, when the Parish of Aston Clinton in Buckinghamshire made a £200,000 claim against a farm. As a result of the claim and the massive legal costs it prompted, the farm had to be sold and its owners went bankrupt ten years ago.

The 1985 recommendation included a draft bill, which was tabled in the Lords by Lord Avebury, in the 2014-5 and 2015-6 sessions, with NSS support. The church said it would only accept abolition if compensated.

Neither Lord Avebury nor the NSS accepted that compensation would be appropriate as the church had practically stopped trying to collect CRL on residential properties, meaning there was minimal loss of revenue for which to compensate.

Stephen Evans, National Secular Society CEO, said: "The Church of England, with its considerable wealth, is hardly in a position to make financial demands on individuals to pay for church repairs, so it's unfair that homebuyers are having to spend money on insurance against potential claims. Chancel repair liability is a medieval relic that should be abolished – and the sooner the better."

Image: Parish church of St Nicholas, Fisherton de la Mere, Wiltshire; © Chris Downer [CC BY-SA 2.0]

Share your story

Secularism isn't just about moral or theoretical arguments, it's about people's real lives. Telling your story can help our campaigns and others in similar situations.

- Share your story
- Need advice?

- Share on What's App
- Share on Facebook
- Share on Twitter
- Share on Email
- Subscribe to RSS Feed

Tags: Disestablishment

Related Campaigns

-

Disestablish the Church of England

A state religion has no place in a 21st century democracy.

Read More

Related Articles

NSS announces major conference on protecting liberal values

Kenan Malik, Joan Smith and more speaking at NSS Secularism 2024 conference in London. Read More »

New extremism definition may put free speech at risk, NSS warns

Proposed definition could 'label secularists as extremists'. Read More »

A state Church is no bulwark against extremism – but secularism is

With its commitment to the separation of religion and state and safeguarding the rights of all individuals, secularism can provide an effective defence against the spread of extremism, says Stephen Evans. Read More »

Report: CofE safeguarding “below standards” of secular institutions

Most victims and survivors unsatisfied with safeguarding approaches, while safeguarding 'weaponised' to remove those "seen as a nuisance", report finds. Read More »

Resist calls for £50m a year for churches, NSS urges minister

Churches trust also calls for churches to host NHS services. Read More »