This year's nominations in full

Pope Benedict xiv – “For doing more than anyone to promote the cause of secularism.”

Pat Condell - who has “for several years now risked his life by answering back to the rule of political correctness, the thoughtlessness of religion generally and the increasing threat of Islam in our society.”

Richard Dawkins – nominated for his ongoing dedication to secularism

Stephen Fry – for his consistent critical approach to religion and his performance in the IQ2 debate

Sabin Guzzanti - Italian comedian and activist who was threatened with prosecution by the Vatican for “insulting the Church” when she called the Vatican to stay out of Italian politics – and saying that the pope would be tormented in hell by “great big gays” in revenge for what he has done to them on earth.

Jim Hatfield - for his “outstanding work over the past nine years in examining the mindset and methods of the authors of Greek scripture. By taking on this task he has successfully exposed the in-built folly of the Christian religion, and done so in terms impossible for the churches to shrug off.”

Allan Hayes - President of the Leicester Secular Society.

Peter Hearty - for the hilarious and telling Platitude of the Day blog

Oliver Kamm - a leader writer and columnist on The Times. “Oliver is an eloquent and persuasive champion of secularism, both in his blog and in his columns for The Times and other media.

John Keats (posthumously), - famed for his poetry, but also a great thinker and philosopher.

Ludovic Kennedy (posthumously) - for his lifelong dedication to secularism.

Sean Lock - made what has to be the finest, simplest and most incisive comment on the whole horrible religious mess. "I don't believe in God because I've thought about it."

The Rev'd Canon Eric MacDonald - For this devastating letter to Rowan Williams

Azar Majedi - "is well known internationally for her constant campaigning to promote secularism and to fight against political Islam and to expose the inherent misogyny in all religions."

Pragna Patel of the Southall Black Sisters - This group offers support and safety to women from ethnic minorities who have suffered abuse. It takes its secularism very seriously and accepts no excuses or justification for violence against women based on religion.

Penn & Teller - for their critical attack on the Vatican

Terry Pratchett – novelist, secularist and freethinker

Debbie Purdy - for pushing religious influence on individual freedom and dignity a little bit further away."

Samantha Stein - for establishing and directing Camp Quest UK

Sophie in 't Veld MEP - for her work on separation of politics and religion in the European Parliament

Sir Stephen Wall – former chief of staff to Cardinal Cormac Murphy O'Connor who subsequently went on to attack the Church in no uncertain terms, calling the Pope "just plain loopy"
